

LITERARY NOTES.

"Veronica Lee," the most aesthetic of English women writers, is about to publish a novel which she calls "Miss Brown"—a reminder of Mrs. Walford's finished and posthumous of "Mr. Smith." The subject of "Miss Brown" is said to be the aesthetic life of the period.

"Treysman" is to be the title of the forthcoming Bengali version of Homer's Iliad. The translator is following Pope's English version.

"Dr. Sevier" will be published in book form by J. E. Osgood & Co. The description of Mary's ride into Bedlam in the September installment of the story is the strongest and most vital part of it yet published.

J. E. Osgood & Co. are preparing to bring out "The Golden Spike," by Mr. Edward King.

Mark Pattison, the late rector of Linlithgow College, and a literary man of serious learning and large ability, has been mentioned sometimes as the original of Mr. Casaubon in George Eliot's "Middlemarch." This fancy is, however, untenable, for Pattison was not a pedant, and he was, moreover, a dearly valued friend of the author of "Middlemarch." He was the brother of "Sister Dora," the philanthropist, and one of a family of twelve children, ten sisters coming between him and his only brother.

Mr. Conway's novel of "Called Back" is being published serially in Dutch in a Rotterdam newspaper.

"Mr. Brett Harte," the "London Academy" announces, "presents the melancholy spectacle of a man of genius who has largely given himself over to the production of pot-luckers."

A cheap edition of Miss Anna Katharine Green's clever novel, "Hand and Ring," has just been brought out by G. P. Putnam's Sons.

The late Mrs. Anna Mary Howitt Watts, the daughter of William and Mary Howitt, contributed to literature in her "Art Student in Munich" a little book, the charm of which can never wear out. Mrs. Watts showed much talent as a painter in her early years. She was a delicate, refined, and gentle woman, full of kindness and frankness.

The latest volume of "Leaves" from Henry Greenle's memory records the exceeding admiration exhibited by Prince Albert by Napoleon III. Greenle goes on to say that "the enthusiasm was by no means reciprocal, although the Prince liked the Emperor well enough." However that may have been, when the Emperor and his consort paid their visit to the Queen at Windsor, the Royal children took an immense fancy to the Empress, and "were never out of her room." At the leave-taking both Empress and children were dissolved in tears.
